

Cancer Diagnosis: Options and Hope

Many physicians and patients have made referrals to me throughout the years to treat their patients or friends who have been diagnosed with one form of cancer or another. If you review Section Three of this website, entitled "Testimonials", you will read what some of these patients have had to say in their very own words.

From the outset, I want you to know that I believe in chemotherapy and radiation. I know that many of my colleagues do not share my position. No matter, I do believe in the expert use of these treatments. However, I am convinced by my clinical experience and the medical literature about the efficacy of non-pharmaceutical treatments. It is my experience and firm conviction that ignoring this mounting evidence is not in the best interest of anyone who has received this diagnosis.

Below, I want to refer you to some references that share important information you should know. The physicians and researchers I cite are very well-respected and well-known.

After reading through these references, I ask you to take a look at the link for "Epigenetics" found in this section. Please, at the very least, read the Amazon.Com reviews of the books I have cited. If you can find them at a bookstore and skim through them or, better yet, after skimming buy them if the information there appears as if it would help you gain a different perspective. I will refer to some of this cutting-edge literature during our consultations.

I invite you to consider how much more powerful your treatment plan will be if it incorporates that information and recommendations found in the references I have provided. There is so much more I can share with you, and I hope to have that opportunity.

Please copy these links and place them in your browser or copy them by hand and then type them into your browser.

The following article is a synopsis of a much, much longer article written by these same physicians. It provides a summary of the mounting research make a strong case for the use of antioxidant supplements along with chemotherapy and radiation. The original article is 29 pages long and includes 180 references from respected, conventional, peer-reviewed journals from the United States and around the world.
