

A Possible Road Back from Joint Pain

The following is taken from the Home Page of The Road Back Foundation. It's a collection of patient information and research studies have helped patients and physicians become familiar with options for treatment about which they had not known. I provide this website address for your exploration and education. We can discuss the material you read together. Especially, I advise you to read as many of the articles found in the Education section. Do not forget to look at Dr. David Brownstein's article entitled "Hormones and Chronic Disease." There is much to digest here. There are many other treatment options from which you and your physician might choose. There are complementary treatment options I am happy to discuss with you. If you wish, read through the material and then we can talk.

The website is: www.roadback.org.

You will find that the Home Page begins as follows:

Welcome! You have reached a unique resource. The Road Back Foundation's (RBF) Website includes information and support about a safe, low-cost treatment for rheumatic conditions such as rheumatoid arthritis, scleroderma and related diseases. The particular treatment focus here is antibiotic therapy, proven safe and effective in NIH-sponsored clinical trials.

The Road Back Foundation, founded as a non-profit, charitable organization in 1993, is a peer-to-peer endeavor run entirely by volunteers -- professionals who are dedicated to providing information and support to people interested in antibiotic protocols (AP). RBF does not accept corporate contributions from industry. None of the people involved in this effort receive a salary or other compensation. The Foundation is supported solely by individuals who have personally experienced or witnessed the life-changing results of antibiotic treatment.
